

Clyde W. White - First Principal of Lincoln High School San Francisco
This is his inspirational speech given to the first graduating class 6 months after the bombing of Pearl Harbor and in the midst of WWII.

In a few days, you, the members of the graduating class, will be leaving your school. Many of you will go on to institutions of higher learning, some of you will enter the fields of business and industry, while others will become members of the armed forces of these United States.

All of you will be doing your best to further the task before this nation and her allies—the preservation of the democratic ideals which we as Americans cherish so highly and now as never before see challenged over the entire world.

The problems which you and all other young people will face are most perplexing, for you are the leaders, the thinkers and the architects of the future. There is a war to win, a peace to be adjudicated and a weary world to be rehabilitated economically, socially and politically. To accomplish all these things it will be necessary to have the highest degree of intelligent cooperative action combined with a willingness on the part of each to accept his responsibility.

May each of you be equal to this challenge!

C. W. WHITE, Principal.
